We cordially invite everyone to a final conference for the research project “Phonetics, Phonology and New Orthographies in Roman and Indigenous Script: Helping Native Language Communities in the Himalayas (PhoPhoNO)”. PhoPhoNO represents a joint project between the University of Bern in Switzerland and International Christian University of Japan and embodies a new approach to the documentation and description of linguistic structures, by combining the expertise and competence of scholars working in different domains and allowing more in-depth research. A phonological orthography of the Drenjongke language of Sikkim with results from phonetic research on the language will be showcased during the conference. Orthographies for Tamang will likewise be presented and evaluated in light of phonological research on the language.
